Factory jobs sagging again

PHILADELPHIA. The Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank said its business activity index dropped to minus 16.6 from minus 5.8 in May, far below economists' expectations for a reading of zero, according to a Reuters poll.

Any reading below zero indicates contraction in the region's manufacturing. "It's a pretty horrendous result," economist Jeremy Lawson said. REUTERS

▶ Fanucci has taken the reins of Philadelphia's most famous restaurant.

NICHOLAS FANUCCI. LE BEC-FIN'S NEW FACE UNABASHEDLY FRENCH

Nicholas Fanucci ran Georges Perrier's storied eatery from 2000-2002, when he decamped Philadelphia for the French Laundry in Yountville, Calif.; he returned this year when news spread that Perrier was offering the building and business for sale.

"People are surprisingly happy in our request to wear a jacket," said Nicholas Fanucci, general manager and owner of the newly reopened Walnut Street restaurant Le Bec-Fin, which has a dress code for the beautiful central dining room.

The Gallic general manager has overseen an interior decor renovation that restored the restaurant to the original splendor of its golden age, complete with gleaming silverware, starched napkins and two glittering crystal chandeliers over the main dining room, whose capacity has been reduced from 18 to 11 tables to create a more intimate dining experience.

"The majority of our team is from the French Laundry and Per Se," says Fanucci, referencing chef-owner Thomas Keller's legendary destinations. The unabashedly French menu is the product of both classic technique and a modern approach to cuisine.

Newlyweds Lee Styer and Jessie Prawlucki, who co-own East Passyunk Avenue BYOB Fond, both put in time at Le Bec-Fin. Styer did a year as sous chef; Prawlucki finished her three-and-a-half-year stint as pastry chef. "Chef Perrier definitely influenced me," said Styer, who visited the restaurant for a preopening cocktail party.

Though the dining room decor is not a significant departure from the Paris salon it was originally meant to evoke, "It's night and day in the kitchen," added Styer.

▶ End of a long era.

117-year-old paper closing

The Archdiocese of Philadelphia will lay off 45 employees and consolidate several offices to help close a $17 million deficit, officials announced Thursday.

Under the restructuring plan, the church will also stop publishing the 117-year-old Catholic Standard and Times, a weekly newspaper that became a monthly last year, and Phaith Magazine will be suspended.

Archbishop Charles Chaput said the debt was not a result of recent litigation costs related to priest sex abuse, which he estimated two weeks ago at $11 million.

"I take this action with great reluctance, as one of several urgently needed steps to restore the local church to a healthy financial footing," Chaput said of the layoffs.

Chaput said the changes should allow the archdiocese to balance its budget by next July. METRO/SDL

The condition and rarity of an item determines its price. If an item is in excellent condition and very rare it might be worth the up to price, or even more. City budget to go down to the July 1 deadline

RICARD LARMA/METRO

▶ Nutter isn't nervous about a government shutdown.

Residents who haven't been following the budget battle moving its way through City Hall will no doubt take notice if an agreement is not reached by its quickly-approaching June 30 deadline. In that case, the city will be stripped of its spending power, including the ability to make payroll and provide services ranging from trash pickup to public safety.

A source familiar with city government called the apparent lack of consensus between Council members and Mayor Michael Nutter's administration an "aberration." The two remaining sticking points are real estate taxation and raising additional funds for the embattled school district, with Nutter pushing for a property tax overhaul that would generate $94 million in revenue for education.

City Council last week gave preliminary approval to delay property tax reform, instead voting to raise $40 million through a combination of hikes to the real estate tax and in the use and occupancy tax levied on businesses.

"I never make pronouncements about what I'm going to sign or not sign or anything like that."
NUTTER, ON WHETHER HE WOULD VETO COUNCIL'S BUDGET PLAN

Nutter would not say whether he would veto a budget, which would make it nearly impossible to meet the cutoff. "I don't know even when the Council is, at this moment, going to vote on the budget," he said Thursday. "Possibly, it could be next week — that's a lifetime in this business. I never make pronouncements about what I'm going to sign or not sign or anything like that."

Facing criticism from powerful business lobbyists on one side and members of the school district's blue-collar union on the other, Council on Thursday scheduled an additional June 28 meeting to their legislative calendar.

Zack Stahlberg of political watchdog Committee of Seventy said that the back and forth is not unusual. "They're all politicians — most of them are of the same party — they can negotiate a deal," he said. "I'm not even sure I would put this on the high end of the scale of contentiousness."

awigglesworth@metro.us

New property assessments will count, Nutter says

PHILADELPHIA. Another possible scenario is that the administration could simply go ahead with the property values from the new AVI assessments slated to be completed in the fall while keeping the current tax rate.

"Let's be really clear on this: When the chief assessment officer certifies the new assessments, those are the new assessments," Nutter said. "And once we have them, we have to use them. That's the law."

Property owners, in that case, would see an astronomical rise in their tax bills unless legislation — currently pending in Harrisburg — is passed.

"If somehow some way, that particular piece of legislation, upon someone filing suit, is struck down, we need to have a variety of back up plans," Nutter said of the state safeguard. "Including either the ability to revisit this issue in what will be then the next fiscal year or the authority to lower millage rates, which currently we don't have." METRO

Commerce secretary resigns after car crashes

WASHINGTON. U.S. Commerce Secretary John Bryson, under investigation for his role in two car crashes on the same day this month, said on Thursday he was resigning to prevent distractions at the department he led for less than a year.

Police found Bryson unconscious behind the wheel of his Lexus on June 9 after he crashed into one car twice, left the scene of the accident and collided with another vehicle.

He was cited on suspicion of a felony hit-and-run in the first crash, but so far no charges have been filed.

Police said on Thursday they were awaiting results of toxicology tests and the Commerce Department said initial tests showed he had a seizure. REUTERS

Sandusky's adopted son: I was molested

PENNSYLVANIA. Jerry Sandusky's adopted son has told prosecutors he was molested by the former Penn State coach, now on trial on child sex abuse charges, the Harrisburg Patriot-News reported on Thursday.

Matt Sandusky, 33, said through his attorney Andrew Shubin that he met prosecutors this week and told them for the first time that Jerry Sandusky molested him, the newspaper said.

Matt Sandusky was adopted by Jerry and Dottie Sandusky as an adult, after going to live with the family as a foster child, it said.

The jury began deliberations on Thursday. REUTERS

Court rules against FCC over profanity, nudity

B2M PRODUCTIONS/GETTY IMAGES

▶ The FCC can impose fines of $325,000 on each station that airs indecent material, including images and words, between 6 a.m. and 10 p.m.

The Supreme Court on Thursday ruled against a government crackdown on broadcast profanity and nudity, saying the Federal Communications Commission had not given fair notice of its policy change in three high-profile incidents.

The unanimous high court ruling, written by Justice Anthony Kennedy, declared that the FCC's standards were vague as applied to the broadcasts at issue in the case. It did not decide the larger question of whether the indecency policy violated constitutional free-speech rights.

Under the policy which dated to 2001 and was amended in 2004, broadcasters can be fined for airing a single profanity blurted out on a live show or for brief nudity. Government lawyers said it covered the "F-word" and the "S-word" that denote "sexual or excretory activities," respectively.

The justices threw out a U.S. appeals court ruling that struck down the policy on speech grounds and the justices said several options are before the commission, including reviewing the current policy and modifying it.

FCC Chairman Julius Genachowski said the agency is reviewing the Supreme Court decision, which he said appeared narrowly limited to procedural issues over actions taken years ago.

Republican Commissioner Robert McDowell said the agency should quickly implement the Court's decision and move on to address a backlog of nearly 1.5 million pending indecency complaints, dating as far back as 2003 and involving some 9,700 TV broadcasts. REUTERS

THEY DREAMED OF PARADISE

New exhibit at the PMA looks at earthly bliss through the eyes of Gauguin, Cezanne and Matisse

In Greek mythology, Arcadia is a pastoral utopia where humans live in perfect harmony with nature, spending their days in blissful contemplation of the unspoiled landscape. Or, as Philadelphia Art Museum curator Joseph J. Rishel puts it, "people standing around under trees without any clothes on."

There are a wealth of such images of joyful, tree-shaded nudists in the Art Museum's new exhibition, "Gauguin, Cezanne, Matisse: Visions of Arcadia." That natural paradise has been a recurrent theme throughout the history of art: The show's 60-plus works reach as far back as 1627 for Poussin's "La Grande Bacchanale," and forward to the first decades of the 20th century, where the trees give way to smokestacks and skyscrapers in the eyes of the cubists.

The headliners, though, are three monumental masterpieces gathered together in one room for the first time: Gauguin's "Where Do We Come From? What Are We? Where Are We Going?" Cezanne's "The Large Bathers" and Matisse's "Bathers By a River." Rishel was inspired to contemplate the relation of these modern masters examining one of the most classic subjects.

"Why did three of the most radical, progressive, avant-garde artists of their time," Rishel asked during a preview of the exhibition, "revert to one of the oldest themes in the history of Western thought?"

▶ John JH Phillips' interactive sound and video, "Night Ferry," debuts June 30 at 8 p.m. at Schuylkill Banks Crescent Park.

The art of the neighborhood

The Commotion Festival features works inspired by Grays Ferry, Point Breeze and South of South Street

Tasked with creating a public art project in the Grays Ferry, Point Breeze and South of South Street neighborhoods, John JH Phillips soon discovered that the job was even bigger than it sounded.

"As everyone in Philadelphia knows, that community is not just three neighborhoods — it's dozens," says Phillips, a sound and video artist and UArts professor. "It changes almost block by block."

The Commotion project was developed as a partnership between UArts, PECO and the Philadelphia Redevelopment Authority's long-running Percent for Art program. As part of the utility's project to build an electric substation in Grays Ferry, it funded the development of a public art program.

Through a six-month process of community engagement, Phillips and another half-dozen artists came up with the Commotion Festival, a series of site-specific work that grew out of the artists' experiences in those neighborhoods.

"We tried to have these artists do the very best work they can do to show respect for the neighbors," Phillips explains. "Rather than just plonk that down in somebody's neighborhood, we thought about how we could get people involved in contributing to, participating in and becoming part of each one of these final festival projects."

Pieces running this week in the festival include Ed Shockley's play "The Greatest Life That Never Was," inspired by personal narratives from local residents; dance performances by Subcircle and Team Sunshine at Shiloh Baptist Church; and the raising of Jebney Lewis' 20-foot sculpture and Phillips' own maze of interactive video screens at Crescent Park.

▶ Leopold Stokowski — pictured here directing the Philadelphia Orchestra in the early 1940s — is the star of this weekend's nostalgic program.

As the Philadelphia Orchestra continues to emerge from bankruptcy, they're attempting to reconnect audiences with their heyday. This weekend's Stokowski Celebration will return the Orchestra to the Academy of Music and place their most iconic figure center stage.

Leopold Stokowski's silhouette has been engraved upon the popular imagination since the release of "Fantasia" in 1940 (that tall conductor atop a podium shaking Mickey Mouse's hand). But before he was Disney-fied, Stokowski was perhaps the world's leading showman, innovator and promoter of classical music. And, as music director from 1912 to 1940, he cemented the Philadelphia Orchestra's reputation as one of the world's most revered cultural institutions. "He put the Orchestra on the map," says Jeremy Rothman, vice president for artistic planning at the Orchestra. "His charisma and music-making built what became known as the Philadelphia Sound. His vision for recordings, television and film vastly broadened the familiarity that people had with the Orchestra."

With help from Symphony V.0 — a company that specializes in animation, lighting and projections for live classical music — the Orchestra promises a truly Stokowski-esque spectacle. The performances will feature iconic pieces from the Orchestra's salad days: Brahms' Symphony No. 1, Wagner's overture to "Tannhauser,"

Yannick on deck this weekend

The Stokowski Celebration marks the official beginning of Yannick Nezet-Seguin's tenure as music director. The Montreal native is only the eighth music director in the Philadelphia Orchestra's history. While almost all of the lighting and animation in the Stokowski Celebration will correspond to Nezet-Seguin's specific musical interpretations, the "Fantasia" segment has been designed by Disney. The orchestra will utilize Disney's score and technology to sync the music to the film.

Tchaikovsky's suite from "The Nutcracker" and, of course, Bach's "Toccata and Fugue in D Minor" set against animation from "Fantasia."

As far as Rothman's concerned, Stokowski would approve of the unconventional Disney partnership. "While we may have a perception of a very static and traditional kind of experience in the concert hall, 100 years ago we may have been far more innovative. Sometimes it's OK to reach and try to be more visionary."

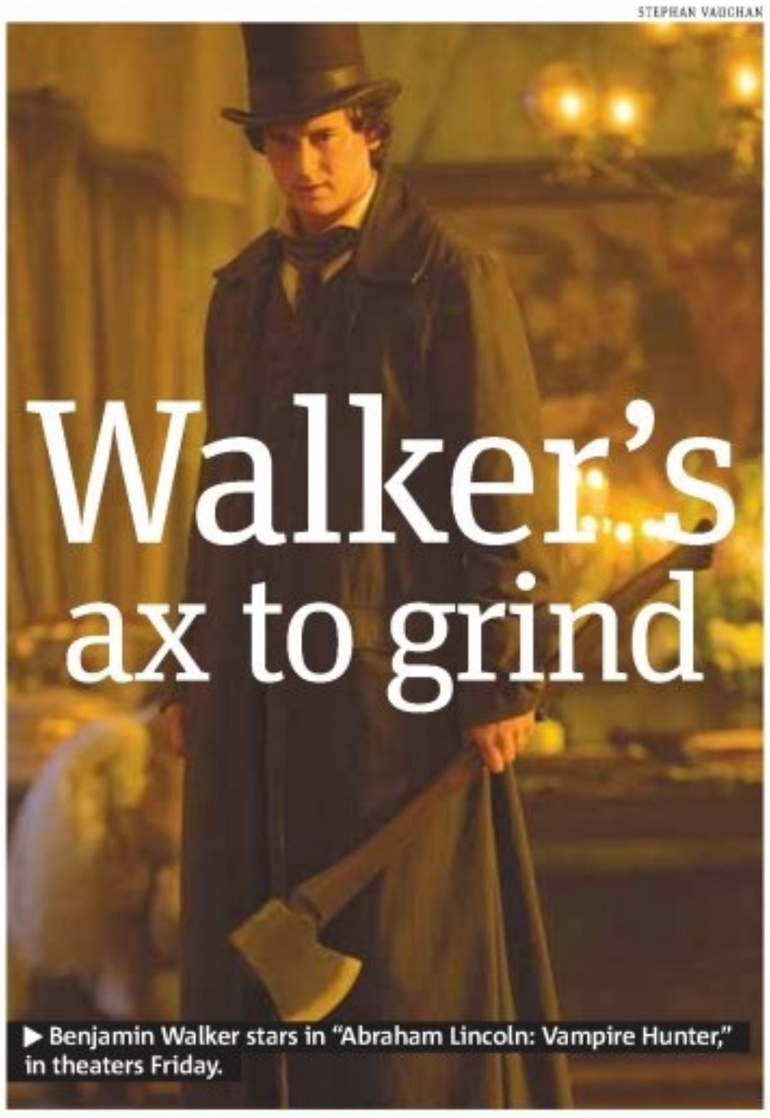
Don't expect campy humor from 'Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter'

The star of the show assures us that it's all quite serious

Walker's ax to grind

STEPHAN VAUGHAN



▶ Benjamin Walker stars in "Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter," in theaters Friday.

Playing a president always piques the public's attention, and actor Benjamin Walker has not one executive role, but two under his belt.

In "Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter," the Juilliard-trained actor plays the instrumental leader himself from the age of 19 to his death at 55.

So you played Andrew Jackson in the Broadway musical "Bloody Bloody Andrew Jackson" and now you're playing Abraham Lincoln.
Yeah, I got the market cornered on weird presidents.

Which one did you enjoy portraying more?
That's tough. As Americans we're fascinated by our leaders, but I think Lincoln, people are more familiar with his legacy so there's a bit more expected of you when you play Lincoln. The Andrew Jackson that we did was a very absurd interpretation.

Which president would you like to play next?
I think Woodrow Wilson would be fascinating.

What did you honestly think when they gave you the script to "Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter"?
I wanted to know who's directing it. That would tell me what kind of project it would be. When they told me it was Timur [Bekmambetov], it kind of put my mind at ease.

How did you prepare for the role?
I read three or four books. The most helpful one was called "Lincoln's Melancholy," because it's about his childhood and how he dealt with death and misery and the more gothic side of who he is. That certainly lends itself more nicely to the story we're telling.

I guess you come from a long line of vampire hunters in cinema history. There's Buffy, Blade, and so on.
We've been killing them for a long time.

Did you read up about vampires?
Yeah. We referenced Nosferatu, kind of the return to the truly evil vampires. You got guys like Rufus Sewell playing vampires — it's pretty believable when they're jumping at you with sharp teeth. There's very little acting involved when you're fighting for your life.

What movies did you personally reference to get yourself in the vampire hunting mood?
I've always been a fan of "Lost Boys."

This film straddles the line between historical fiction and horror. Were you happy with the decision to make this a horror action film rather than a drama?
My biggest concern was that it was not campy, that the joke was in the title and that's where it ends. That we're not making fun of it, that we're not being disrespectful to Lincoln, that we're trying to make a period piece that had some vampires in it.

Which stunts did you do?
I did most of it, particularly the ax fighting. Timur was very hesitant to shoot it where you see my face, then you cut to the back of some stunt guy's head. He wanted these long shots where we see the motion and we see Lincoln. So they tried to get me to do as much as I could.

Was this the first time you picked up an ax?
No. What's ironic is I spent the summer before that working cutting down trees. With a chainsaw mind you, but yeah, I know how to use an ax!

Q&A

Able Abe

What most surprised you about Lincoln?
Probably the most helpful fact that came to light was that he was an ordinary guy that came from very humble beginnings. That's what makes him extraordinary: He did extraordinary things in spite of it.

▶ While beautifully animated, this Scottish tale falls short of the animation studio's highest benchmark.

Pixar's meek 'Brave'

Directors: Mark Andrews, Brenda Chapman and Steve Purcell
Cast: Kelly Macdonald, Billy Connolly

Rating: PG Grade: ❶❷❸❹❺

"Brave" may not be one of Pixar studio's best films (such as "Wall-E" or "Up") but it would be misconstrued to denounce it based on that discrimination anyhow.

The Scottish fable of tomboy princess Merida (voiced by Kelly Macdonald) who refuses to resign to marriage takes a surprising tonal turn once she unwittingly has her mother placed under a witch's curse. However trifling, stunning animation and fun characters help make up for a hollower helping from Pixar.

Everything and nothing

'Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter' is such a bizarre mix of things, it might be amazing ... or it might be the messiest thing you've ever seen

"Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter"
Director: Timur Bekmambetov
Cast: Benjamin Walker, Mary Elizabeth Winstead, Anthony Mackie
Rating: R
Grade: ●●●○○

"Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter" is, in essence, the smashing together of mismatched toys by an aggressive, fever-addled 8-year-old. And, if you can let go of that thorny abstract idea we call "reality," you might just enjoy it.

Director Timur Bekmambetov is quoted as saying, "You haven't seen this movie [before]." And he's right: "Vampire Hunter" is one of the more bewildering spectacles available for public consumption at the moment. The frenzied humping of half-sentences culled from Wikipedia, it's a mistake to think of this movie as a full offering of any of its parts — in particular, the historicity of 19th century America and its rock-star president. Rather, imagine this movie as the ultimate experiment in stunt-casting, where the idea of "casting" is inverted; the actor is negligible, but his character is king. Abe Lincoln kills vampires with the strategic faultlessness of a Lannister and the lanky dexterity of Kevin Durant. Marfan Syndrome, meet your poster-boy.

TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX CORP.

Taught by a dandy steampunk vampire yoda, an orphaned Abe becomes a four-score-and-seventh-degree black belt of axe-fu, dispatching vampires faster than you can say Dred Scott. In a flurry of mid-movie plot advances, he meets Mary Todd, marries her, retires vampire slaying, has a kid, becomes a lawyer, is elected president, Civil Wars in Gettysburg.

Then the second half begins.

It's absurd. It honors nothing and, in retrospect, might dishonor everything with equal force. It's hard to find a movie as daringly insipid at the risk of honoring its premise. This is a movie about Abraham Lincoln, sort of, killing vampires, sort of, which represent the slave-happy South, sort of, and his purported homosexual leanings, sort of. Over the credits, a nu metal song plays. Abraham Lincoln loved: Killing vampires, Mary Elizabeth Winstead, axes, flaming trains, guys(?) and nu metal. Stick that in your history book and smoke it.

Movie review

'Seeking a Friend for the End of the World'
Director: Lorene Scafaria
Cast: Steve Carell, Keira Knightley

Rating: R Grade: ●●●●○

A 70-mile wide asteroid is bound for Earth, sure to annihilate all of humankind, and revelry is setting in. Meaningless sex, rampant drug use and vicious riots have swept the globe — but Steve Carell's character, Dodge, doesn't want any part of it. Prompted by the asteroid news, his wife leaves him, rendering him distant from the chaos around him. A chance meeting with his bubbly neighbor, Penny (Keira Knightley), leads them to embark on an adventure to find closure amidst impending doom. You'll believe in their stories, touched to be privy to the bond they create near the end of days.

We've seen Carell as the mild-mannered man before, but he continues to shine in the role. Knightley's effervescence makes for a lovely foil. The movie will linger in your mind long after its final powerful scene. ● MEREDITH ENGEL

THE WORD

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

The feed ...

Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, David Lynch is reaching out, Rosie O'Donnell has an idea for a new job, Patton Oswalt is giving some classics a closer listen and John Stamos is getting deep.

@DAVID_LYNCH
Dear Twitter Friends, I bought a 1940's toy telephone and this weekend I'm going to be making some calls. What are you up to this weekend?

@Rosie
I wanna host draw something - as a web game show

@pattonoswalt
Disturbing amount of pride being swallowed in 60's pop songs.

@JohnStamos
#notetoself: enjoy the little things, because one day you may look back and discover they were the big things.

Boredom blamed for Depp-Paradis split

Johnny Depp and Vanessa Paradis are staying quiet about their separation — meaning "inside sources" and "close friends" are extra busy.

According to one source, the reason the ultrafamous, continent-hopping couple broke up after 14 years is pretty much the same reason us mortals call it quits: boredom, with a side of sparkly things in the distance.

"He was bored senseless with her; being with Vanessa was making him miserable," a questionable friend tells RadarOnline. "The spark had gone, and there was nothing left. Johnny just wants more from life and believes Vanessa deserves to be happier, too. He's not embroiled in some hot and heavy new romance and he has no plans to jump straight into something straight away, but he is keen to have some fun again."

If nothing else, the fun part seems to be true. After performing with the Black Keys at the MTV Movie Awards, Depp's been spotted out in Hollywood with Marilyn Manson.

It's times like this we're glad we're not artistic millionaires. Can you imagine having to try new things and party with rock stars every time your life got boring? We can barely find the motivation to update the Netflix queue.

Today in Kardashian saturation

Kim Kardashian thinks she found something special in current boyfriend Kanye West.

"It's very comforting to have someone that knows everything about you, that respects you, understands, has gone through the similar things," Kim tells Oprah in an interview airing Sunday on the OWN network. "I feel like I'm at a really happy, good space."

Kim, we know love — even your brand of it — can be blind, so listen very carefully: We all know everything about you. I spent more time at your wedding than I did at my own. This intimate, special connection you're feeling? Kanye, like the rest of us, probably just "lost" the remote one weekend.

Drama on the Judd homestead

Wynonna Judd and drummer Cactus Moser got married earlier this year on the Judd family farm — but mom Naomi and sister Ashley were missing from the ceremony. Wynonna tells UsMagazine.com that she doubts they knew about the wedding, despite the fact that they live there.

"We're getting ready to sit down with our life coach and re-evaluate what we want out of this relationship," she says of her family. "We just don't have a lot of contact right now, if any, because we're all doing our own thing."

Rich people, you are killing us today. Fire the "life coach," have a good fight on the lawn and focus on what's important: One of you just married a guy named "Cactus."

Talking points

Baldwin didn't punch a photog — this time

Alec Baldwin insists he did not punch a photographer in New York recently, but he doesn't deny making physical contact with the man in question. "There was a person in front of me and he was blocking him. And the guy lunged and almost hit me in the teeth with the lens of the camera. So I just pushed the guy away," Baldwin says in an interview with Charlie Rose.

Justin Bieber: Back off, superfans

Justin Bieber isn't always in the mood to indulge his adoring fans, as a group of them learned at the Toronto airport this week while Bieber waited for girlfriend Selena Gomez to arrive, according to Hollyscoop. "Do I not have any right as a human being to sit and wait for my girlfriend?" he asked during a back-and-forth with some of the assembled fans demanding his attention, complaining that they'd been waiting all day to see him.

There won't be a 'Dumbest'

Jim Carrey won't be taking part in a "Dumb and Dumber" sequel after all, with his rep telling "Entertainment Tonight" that Carrey had become "increasingly frustrated" at Warner Bros. and New Line Cinema's delays in getting the project going. "I would have thought 'Dumb and Dumber To' was a no-brainer," Carrey says in a statement. "After all, it's implied in the title." Carrey and co-star Jeff Daniels were all set to return for the sequel, according to co-director Peter Farrelly.

To Jon Hamm, with love

1. We love that Rhys Ifans always looks like someone woke/dug him up. The actor hit the red carpet for "Spider-Man" in Madrid on Thursday.

2. Something about Jon Hamm makes us want to inhale him. And yeah — we do feel creepy. The actor attended the New York premiere of "To Rome With Love" on Wednesday.

3. Tito, Jackie, Marlon and Jermaine Jackson began their tour in Orillia, Canada, on Wednesday.

4. Let us never be so jaded that Victoria's Secret models and candy don't excite us. Elsa Hosk was on hand Wednesday for a sugar party for the brand in New York.

5. Also on the "Rome" red carpet: Woody Harrelson, looking a little less so-fresh, so-clean.

Easy, healthy Chinese food

Cooking Channel's Ching-He Huang teaches us how it's done

Chinese food doesn't have to be the greasy and sauce-laden dishes you're used to ordering for takeout.

"Chinese food has so many different levels, and it can be very healthy," says Ching-He Huang, the host of "Easy Chinese" on Cooking Channel. "Home cooking is always simple, healthy and fresh."

Huang gave us some tips for lightening up traditional Eastern fare.

COOKING CHANNEL

▶ "I try to show people a diversity of Chinese cuisine with a fusion element to it," says Ching-He Huang, the host of Cooking Channel's "Easy Chinese," which airs Saturdays at 8:30 p.m.

Don't fry and douse your meat in sauce — marinate it instead: Huang's five-spice marinade will give your dishes a flavorful punch. "It consists of star anise, citron pepper, fennel, cloves and cinnamon. Get some chicken and marinate it with five-spice, honey, light soy, and grate some garlic and ginger [before putting it] on the grill or on in the oven. You can garnish it with toasted sesame seeds."

Make a soup: "I love to make really healthy, light soups that you can add to," the chef says. "For dinner, you can have a vegetable-based stock with some water, add in some grated ginger and a handful of different kinds of mushrooms because they're full of antioxidants and really healthy. Then chuck in greens, Chinese broccoli, spinach, or whatever you fancy, and some lean fish. Season it with a bit of light soy, sesame oil, salt, ground white pepper and a little bit of rice wine. For me, that shows the epitome of a really good Chinese-based, easy, comforting dish that you can have at home."

Try a salad: Though you might think of rice and noodles when you think of Chinese food, salads are "getting much more popular," Huang says. She loves dressing hers with a grapefruit or lemon vinaigrette.

MEREDITH ENGEL

Her healthy at-home meal

▶ A twist on egg rolls. "In the summertime, we get spring roll skin made of coconut oil and wheat flour. Put in some sliced-up egg omelet, bean sprouts, scallions, cilantro, tofu, then sprinkle peanuts with a bit of brown sugar, and roll it up and eat it. It's the most refreshing thing."

▶ An assortment of different vegetables.

▶ A tofu dish. "Chilled tofu salad is the most delicious thing," she says. "You get silken tofu, chop it up into cubes but still keep it as one block, put it in the fridge and chill it down. Then you make a dressing of light soy, vinegar, sesame oil and sesame seeds and dress it."

▶ A noodle dish. "A bit of stir-fried rice noodles is not overly bad."

Order up!

How to order healthily at a Chinese restaurant

1. Don't order all fried foods. "When Chinese people go out to eat, they'll have a steamed dish, some vegetables and a few meat dishes so everything is balanced."
2. Ask for Yi mien. "It's basically braised noodles — noodles cooked in a soup stock. It's really light and it's healthy."

Politics is political and bias is wrong

RE: "LET'S TAKE CARE OF OUR OWN FIRST, THEN HELP OTHERS": I would like to address two recent letters. First: John Hemphill says Obama bows to perverts; does he mean pedophile priests protected by the church? Then he says he's not sure if Obama's moves are political. John, you know what was political? Mitch McConell stating that the No. 1 priority of the GOP was to make sure Obama was a one-term president — not fix the economy, not end wars, not get bin Laden! Second: Jim Alvin says "the president" should be tried for treason. Jim, you're four years too late.
ROBERT LA ROSA, VIA E-MAIL

Taking care of our own first is discrimination. Nationalism, sexism, racism ... they are all discrimination and have no place in our society. We are all people, human beings. Immigrants competing with Americans for jobs is a fallacy. Just ask the farmers in Georgia and Alabama who scaled back production this year because they don't have enough employees. It is never too late to do the right thing, no matter the circumstances.
COREY SAGENICH, VIA E-MAIL

Let's not care about anyone anymore!

RE: "PARTIES AREN'T HERE FOR SOCIETY'S BENEFIT": To Mr. Bryce who states that our government is not meant to help society prosper, apparently he has forgotten all about that little blurb in the preamble to the Constitution about the Government "promoting the general welfare." Most people on that side of the fence tend to disregard this wording completely for some reason. It's incredible how far conservatives will go these days to attack the policies of President Obama, who is trying to lend assistance to the middle and lower classes during a difficult economic time. Now they're arguing that the U.S. government shouldn't help the citizenry of the U.S. at all?! These are the same people who would kill someone if they didn't get their Social Security, unemployment, or disability checks on time!
ROBERT SMITH, VIA E-MAIL

I don't know why anyone in the media gives wind to the argument that Obama should have done something sooner on immigration, or that there could be a realistic permanent solution. When Obama tried to pass the DREAM Act, the GOP filibustered, so we can stop saying there was another option. You cannot criticize Obama for getting the right thing done unless you also consider the GOP's method of not getting anything done.
SCOTT KEELEY, VIA E-MAIL

Bush, Clinton and Obama all to blame

RE: "OBAMA DID NOT INVENT OUR PROBLEMS:" The writer blames our economy on Bush but has no blame for Obama or Clinton. Yet our most serious economic problem began when Clinton deregulated the banks by pushing to repeal the 1933 Glass-Steagall act. This caused our banking system to get in trouble and neither Clinton, Bush nor Obama know how to deal with it. Obama's solution was to back the 849-page Dodd/Frank bill, which is a disaster. If he were a competent leader, he would not let lobbyists amend it past its original length!
PAUL KANE, VIA E-MAIL

Summers are all about block parties, and North Philadelphian Jill Scott's throwing a huge one Saturday at the Mann Center with performances by R&B artists KEM and Eric Roberson, as well as local hero DJ Jazzy Jeff. The Grammy-winning soul singer's latest album, "The Light Of The Sun," climbed directly to the top of the charts last year, and she'll definitely be singing her new hit song "Blessed" at the party.

Tell us a little about your first block party experiences?
Every summer people would put together a big show right in the middle of the street. We'd laugh and enjoy ourselves. Somebody's mom would dance — Ms. Cookie always danced for us. A DJ would bring a turntable. We'd just party, play games and have fun. It was the best, cheapest way to have a good time, and I always loved that they were so community-based.

Did you perform?
Yes, those were my first times in the spotlight. My girlfriends and I once did a fashion show. We took clothes from the house and would sew some things, and everybody clapped for us. It felt great. Or we'd lip-synch songs. One year I was Prince playing the guitar with paisley pants on. That was the beginning for me.

Did you see any of the legendary Philly DJs spin records?
All the time. The first time I saw Lady B was actually in somebody's basement during a house party. I was young, and I wasn't supposed to be there. I saw DJ Jazzy Jeff at a gym party at Central High, and Cosmic Kev. I saw all of them. They ingrained in my brain about what block parties are all about.

And now you're bringing Jazzy Jeff to your own block party.
Yes, he's one of my favorites. We're gonna have fun and bring the community together. If you wanna dance, dance. If you wanna watch, watch. If you wanna make out, go ahead. There's no pressure, and that's the key to throwing a good block party.

Philly heats up 'Hell's Kitchen'

Christina Wilson is competing on the reality show for a permanent gig with Gordon Ramsay in Vegas
Her advice for young chefs

Former Mercato chef Christina Wilson joins a long line of Philly chefs who make the cut on reality cooking shows. We caught up with her to talk "Hell's Kitchen."

What's been the biggest challenge?
Just trying to stay focused. The Red team is getting a little cranky, trying to meet the standards while dealing with office turmoil. It's been tough. The biggest thing is ignoring the noise and staying focused on why I'm here.

Are you a celebrity now? Do you get recognized on the street?
A little bit in Philly, but not really. I'm not out and about, but it did happen twice at a bar. I was with Justin [Antiorio] and Dana [Cohen]. We got recognized, it was weird. It's the only job interview in the world, outside of politics, that you will get recognized. Everyone is watching you on this job interview.

What would it mean to win the whole thing?
Wow, to get my dream job in Vegas, working for the most well-respected chefs in the world, amazing. The little bit I've learned already is unreal. To possibly win, to be out there [in Vegas], with that starting salary, and your career is only going to go up from there. It would be a great platform to jump into a new chapter of my career.

FOX

▶ Philly's own Christina Wilson is competing on "Hell's Kitchen." Catch the next episode Monday at 8 p.m. on FOX.

Quoted

"Philly has done a good job of getting themselves on the map for a number of years." WILSON

What does this mean or do for the Philly restaurant scene?
Philly has done a good job of getting themselves on the map for a number of years. People like Jen Carroll and Jose Garces — Philly is getting a little more respect, doing well in these cooking shows.

Any advice for young chefs?
Keep your head down, mouth shut, eyes open and keep pushing. I didn't go to culinary school, I learned everything on my own. And don't bring your ego into the kitchen. Once those doors open, anything goes.

Phillies call Ruiz 'glue to whole club'

Catcher making strong case for first All-Star berth ◐ Ranks fourth in NL in hitting, on-base percentage ◐ Team hyping 'Vote Chooch' campaign

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Carlos Ruiz is sitting in third place among catchers for the right to represent the NL in the All-Star Game. Go to votechooch.com today to cast your vote (voting ends June 28.

Carlos Ruiz trotted out of the Phillies' dugout and made his way to right field where his teammates were going through their daily stretching routine before batting practice.

"MVP!" they chanted in unison.

Definitely an All-Star. Entering last night's game against the Rockies, Ruiz — affectionately known as "Chooch" — was hitting .354 with nine home runs and 38 RBIs. That was good enough to rank fourth in the National League in hitting, as well as OBP (.422) and fifth in slugging percentage (.579).

Ruiz has already tied his career high with nine homers, and he had seven RBIs in one memorable game May 2 at Atlanta. The numbers are impressive, but they don't tell the whole story.

"Carlos is the glue to our whole club," said Jim Thome. "The pitchers respect him, our whole club respects him, and we believe he's worthy of an All-Star berth. He's been just amazing all season."

Still, Ruiz was in third place in the latest votes tabulated to become the NL's starting All-Star catcher. Ruiz sat 688,987 votes behind San Francisco's Buster Posey, who leads the way with 2,445,005. St. Louis' Yadier Molina is second.

The Phillies have been pushing for Ruiz with a "Vote Chooch" campaign. His teammates consistently don shirts.

"It's a great feeling," Ruiz said. "I would love to play in the All-Star Game. I don't know if it will happen. I am hoping. But my whole focus is on the Phillies day-to-day and getting us going. If the All-Star voting works out, I'll be very happy. My main concern is helping us win as many games as possible."

Fans love Chooch, and he loves fans

Carlos Ruiz is not only the club's best player right now, but their most popular one.

Every time the Phil Collins song "In the Air Tonight" blasts from the loud speakers at Citizens Bank Park for Ruiz's at-bat, the buzz can be felt throughout the stands.

"I appreciate these fans so much," Ruiz said. "They have always supported me and I'm very thankful." METRO/AJ

Harvin angry

Percy Harvin asked for a trade out of Minnesota yesterday. Yes, he wants more money. But more interestingly, he wants more playing time after seeing 58 percent of the offensive snaps in 2011. If Harvin gets those extra reps, the upside is limitless.

OUR MOCK DRAFT MOCKERY

The values of certain players are going to fluctuate wildly over the next two months. Draft strategy will not.

After participating in a 12-team expert mock last week, I was able to see some trends that will stick in August as well:

Quarterback frenzy

The smart play used to be waiting until the middle rounds to draft a quarterback. That's not going to fly anymore as six will come off the board before the second round is over. I chose to hold off until the eighth round for my signal-caller, ending up with Matt Ryan. I also could have taken Robert Griffin III or Jay Cutler. Not too shabby.

Sleepers? Nope

You may think you're in good shape because Ryan Mathews and Julio Jones are on your radar. Think again. Mathews went fifth overall and Jones was an early third-rounder. DeMarco Murray (second round) and Demaryius Thomas (fourth round) aren't going to slip either.

Loose at tight end

The Patriots' tight end usage is sparking a trend. More and more teams are seeking out wildly athletic pass-catchers at the position, creating impressive depth for owners. Passing on Rob Gronkowski in the first round or Jimmy Graham in the second is a good idea when you can get Aaron Hernandez in the fourth or Brent Celek in the 11th.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Cam Newton went No. 16 overall, highlighting a strategy shift at quarterback.

Brandon LaFell

WR, Panthers
LaFell is locked into the No. 2 WR job in one of the game's most aggressive offenses. Coordinator Rob Chudzinski won't let LaFell fail.

Ronnie Hillman

RB, Broncos
Hillman excels in the passing game, a must for backs playing with Peyton Manning. Willis McGahee is on his last legs.

Titus Young

WR, Lions
The explosive Young has been a star at offseason workouts. Don't be surprised if he pushes Nate Burleson for starting snaps.

Top MLB pickups

Rajai Davis, OF, TOR — Now that he's getting regular starts in left field, Davis is going to win the steals category for owners weekly. He has eight swipes in June.

Justin Maxwell, OF, HOU — We've known that Maxwell has had some serious pop ever since his days as a Nationals prospect. Now the Astros are giving him a chance.

Carlos Marmol, RP, CHC — Marmol is still wild, but he's back in the closer's chair for now. Remember that he's only one year removed from a 34-save season.

Newest Eagle excited for opportunity just to compete — steal spot?

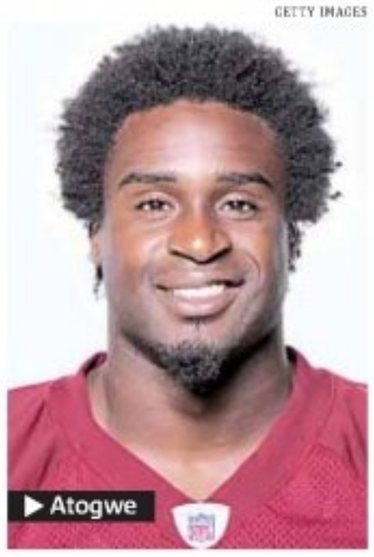
What's in a name? Everything.

Oshiomogho Atogwe was formally introduced to the masses Thursday. One of the first questions fired at him involved his unique first name. While he goes by O.J., the veteran safety took time to explain what his name means when translated.

"God owns the day and only God knows my tomorrow," Atogwe said. "I got the nickname O.J. back when I was 7 or 8 years old when I started playing football. They couldn't pronounce my name."

Atogwe was born in Windsor, Ontario, Canada, but he is of Nigerian decent, something the newest Eagle shares with fellow defensive back Nnamdi Asomugha. Atogwe said he's met Asomugha, but the two haven't spent a lot of time together. He did play with Asomugha's older brother, Chijioke, at Stanford.

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Atogwe

"We haven't had an extremely close relationship because we haven't spent a lot of time together," Atogwe said, "but we have been acquaintances for a long time now."

Atogwe played in 13 games (started eight) for the Washington Redskins last season. The team cut ties with him to save some salary cap space. He's already been told that he'll start training camp as a backup to Nate Allen. Still, turn enough heads and you never know.

"It's definitely a situation that I'm excited about because I haven't been in this position since the second year of my career," Atogwe said. "It's definitely one I look forward to because it's challenging and it will bring the best out of me."

Flyers announce 2012-13 schedule

Claude Giroux is on the cover of the newest EA Sports hockey video game. Along with that comes great responsibility, like a full NHL schedule.

The Flyers revealed their 2012-13 slate Thursday, which opens Oct. 11 against the Boston Bruins at the Wells Fargo Center. The 82-game season ends April 13 at home against the New York Rangers.

"We're anxious to get back on the ice and begin preparing for the start of the 2012-13 season," said Comcast-Spectacor president Peter Luukko. "We know our fans are just as excited."

The Flyers battle each of their Atlantic Division rivals six times, while also facing off against the Northeast Division and Southeast Division. They get 18 contests versus the Western Conference, including one at the Stanley Cup champion L.A. Kings on Jan. 3.

Oh … what about Pittsburgh? The Flyers get them at home Oct. 18, March 26, April 9 — and Feb. 12 and 20, and March 24 in Pittsburgh. METRO

Founded by Jerry and Peg Diehl in 1974, Seabrook House is licensed and CARF-accredited to provide a range of programs, including specialized opioid detox.

Our main treatment center is only 45 minutes from Philadelphia, nestled on a 40-acre manicured estate in rural Southern New Jersey, offering a beautiful, tranquil setting for self-discovery. You can rebuild your life. Treatment works.

Most insurances are accepted. Call to find out about scholarships through the Seabrook House Foundation.
